CREATIVE BRIEF

MADE BY SADIE FOR GRENADE

MULTIPLY 2026

PROJECT OVERVIEW

Stepping up to bat: GRENADE!

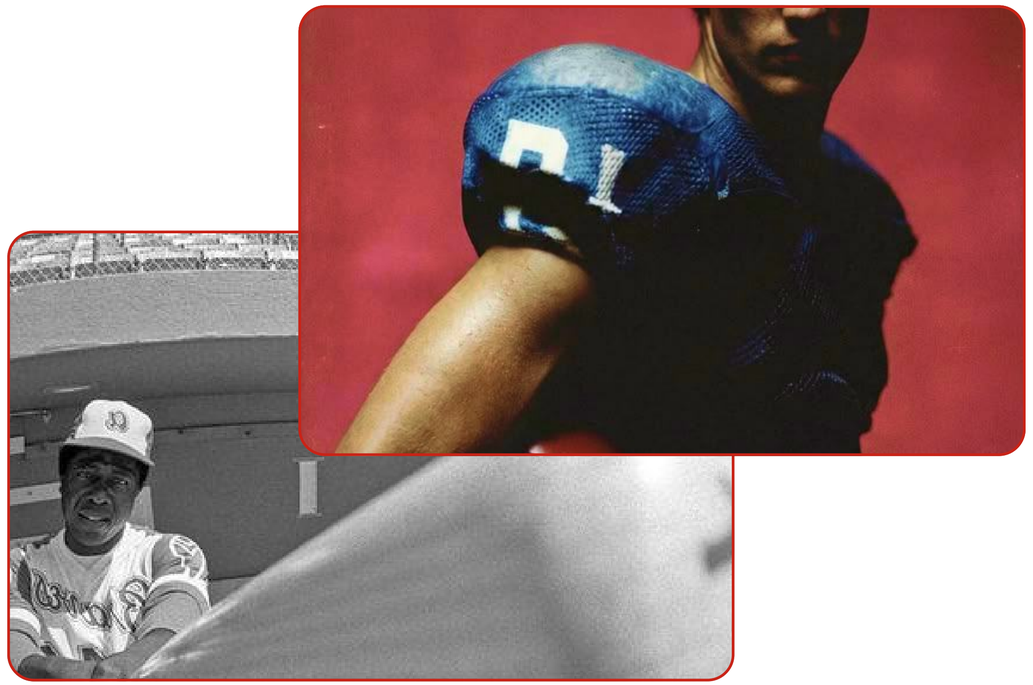

GRENADE is entering one of the most competitive consumer markets in the world. The 18-24 American fitness demographic is saturated with brands all saying the same thing. Louder isn't enough. Creativity is the advantage.

This is an idea Multiply is bringing to GRENADE for a 4th of July campaign. Playing off of All-American themes this Fourth of July, GRENADE Protein Bars will take a loud and explosive approach to getting Americans to take notice and get fueled.

A campaign centered around the classic American pastimes of baseball and football with a nostalgic and edgy editorial style to match GRENADE's brand identity.

The goal: introduce GRENADE Protein Bars to Americans in our target demographic with a BANG!

The approach: create 4th of July themed wild, 'in-your-face' graphics and photographs using real-life fitness influencers as the models

NARRATIVE STYLE

Through the lens of an outlandish sports photographer we see editorialized scenes from the reimagined dugouts of the Founding Fathers.

Replenishing their energy on GRENADE protein bars, they play heavy matches in a mix of colonial and vintage sports garb. With intense, explosive energy, our athletes spur on their comrades in arms to win the match.

Baseball and football, classic American pastimes, are exaggerated and pushed to the max to get the magic of sport across. GRENADE is there on the sidelines for after the match, when our athletes need it most.

They sip tea and eat protein bars calmly in the dugout in the aftermath of their battle on the field of sport.

Intense, cheeky, loud, wild, sporting, and quick.

OBJECTIVES

- Emphasize GRENADE's brand personality in the states, their "American Accent" so to speak
- Showcase creative and wild photography that evokes the feelings GRENADE is selling
- Utilize influencers who already have a following in the fitness space to elevate content reach
- Promote a "poke fun" attitude from a UK wellness brand coming to the States using a 4th of July theme for familiarity

TARGET AUDIENCE

PRIMARY

18-24 year olds near retailers in SoCal interested in the fitness community

SECONDARY

Fitness and wellness community groups like run clubs

TERTIARY

Potential retailers and partners in the U.S.A.

CONT.

18–24 YEAR OLDS

feel like grown ups, but with zero control over their lives

they purchase small goods to make them feel in control

they are easily influenced online by things that feel real

TONE STRATEGY

witty, subtle, English in nature not trying too hard to win anyone over relatable and cool

aspirational escape from reality

INFLUENCING

example: JCrew “Camp Crew” using real influencers to sell a new line.

aspirational, real, raw feeling creates buzz, traction, and multiple streams for the campaign to be seen

‘CAMP CREW’

PROPOSAL

a creative twist that will fit Grenade’s unique voice promote to new American audience.

remembers why we’re all here; to sell protein bars.

TONE

Loud, radiant, cheeky, and relatable.

Nostalgic and warm, with fitness energy .

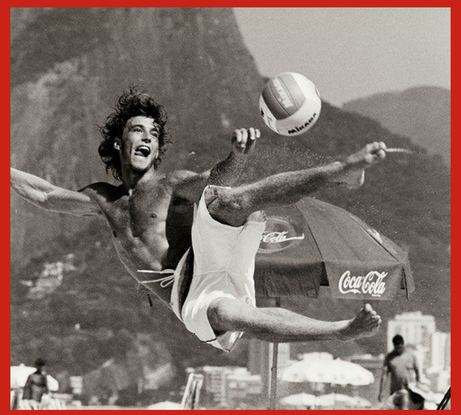

A sense of optimism and teamwork. Pushing to the max to create a mix of themes, working together to promote the product.

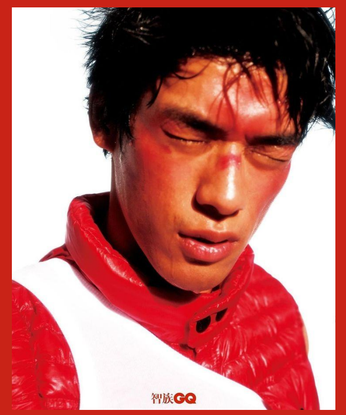

Athletic, witty, and creative. The tone balances humor with power, knowing when to hit and when to hold back.

TIMELINE

The July launch is the loudest moment. The concept gives the 4th of July cultural hook built in.

From there the campaign evolves naturally through the athlete's year: new season energy in September, grind season in November, resolution culture in January, race season in spring. With opportunities for influencer content and more creative group shoots in the future. The humor softens as the year progresses and the creator relationships deepen. By month twelve GRENADE isn't a new brand anymore.

It's part of the conversation.

JULY	AUG	SEP
4th of July Launch	Promo + UGC content	New szn energy
OCT	NOV	DEC
Grind time, lock in	“Winter arc” trends	Everybody needs a rest day
JAN	MAR	APR
Resolution culture peaks	Race szn starts	Get “fit for summer”

THANK YOU.
